Photoshop Elements has some of the same features of Photoshop but with fewer options. Elements also has a number of tutorials that are geared to this software. Photoshop is available for the Mac, Windows, and Linux operating systems. Free and a number of cheaper versions are available for the Mac, and the cost is $399 for the Windows version. There are more expensive versions for other operating systems. You can find more information about obtaining Photoshop at www.adobe.com/products/photoshop. Using the Basic Interface In Figure 9-1, I show you some of the basic controls available in the Photoshop basic interface. First, the canvas to which you add content is where you place and edit images. You also use tools that let you manipulate the canvas. The canvas's background is gray, and your image is displayed in a layer box, as shown in the figure. Figure 9-1: The basic interface of Photoshop offers a number of tools. You use most of Photoshop's tools through the standard mouse interface. You can also use the toolbox, which you see in Figure 9-1, to find additional tools. You can use the toolbox to reveal a list of the tools and icons on the toolbox's menus. You see the toolbox open in the lower-left corner. You can place the toolbox wherever you want on the screen, but I most often keep it hidden until I need it. To use the toolbox, select View⇒Toolbox or press Ctrl+Y. For more on the toolbox, see the later section, "Using the Toolbox." You can temporarily put the toolbox into a preset location on the screen by selecting View⇒Toolbox Position⇒Bottom, and you can also drag the toolbox to any location on the screen. By far, the most important feature of the Photoshop interface is the status bar. The status bar is the bottom bar in the figure. It provides information about the image that you're editing, such as the name of the file, the resolution of the image, what kind of file it is, and what tool you're using. It's also where you see the layers available for your work. Photoshop has three types of layers: The top layer is the layer containing your content, and underneath that layer are two others. The two layers beneath the content layer are called the background and clipping layers. The content layer is where your

Police searching for woman who walked into toddler's nail salon Police are searching for a woman who walked into a nail salon and started cutting the toddler's toenails. Phoenix police say a family member called 911 and police responded to a home near 47th Avenue and Bethany Home Road about 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. Police said the toddler was in a car in front of the home when the woman walked into the salon and started cutting the child's toenails. After the child's mother stopped her in the salon, the woman ran off, police said. The woman is described as about 5 feet tall and thin. She was wearing a black hoodie, black pants and a white knit top with two black stripes down the sleeves. Anyone with information is asked to call police at 623-698-0333.HCCHC (Hong Kong Championship Hot Chocolate Cup) is a relaxing chill-out spot that offers over 70 kinds of hot chocolates, from the classic chocolate lattes, to the newest one, the "Plukie", a chocolate soy milk drink blended with yerba mate and sea-green tea. Their diverse selection can cater to all kinds of taste buds. Dyptch Churrman Newest food on the menu Plukie Ever heard of yerba mate? Want to try it? The "Plukie" is a chocolate soy milk blended with yerba mate and sea-green tea. Not to be fooled by the name, this milk doesn't look like milk, but it does taste like chocolate milk. It is not only the Asian drink that is blended into a chocolate mil, it is also the newest addition to the hot chocolates at HCCHC. Dyptch Churrman Heavenly hot chocolates If you have visited HCCHC, you might have noticed a frequent feature on their menu: the "Heavenly Hot Chocolates". Handcrafted by a man with the highest level of coffee craftsmanship, this title is truly heaven-sent as this makes people's mouth watering. This heavenly hot chocolate has a dark brown color, and the taste of milk is absent. This is actually made with an incredible mixture of cocoa powder, cacao nib, espresso powder and other special blend of flavourings. By the way, the cocoa powder contains few drops of espresso to give it the signature taste.

Q: Odd behaviour of Windows Firewall I'm having a very strange problem when running Windows 7 Enterprise. Basically, I install a new client's program and it opens up a new port on my router. When I go to my Windows Firewall configuration, I can see the new port being open. However, when I run netstat, I don't see anything for that port. The other ports in my router's configuration do get picked up by netstat. I can then run nmap and see that port scanned, but when I scan my own IP (using nmap) I don't see it. I can't find anything about this on the net, and I'm completely baffled. Please let me know if you need any more information. A: You can find out what's using a port with the following command: netstat -abn This will show you everything binding to a port. If you have any other firewall tools installed you can try disabling it and seeing if that helps. Tranquil forests, rural settings, a comfortable guesthouse, and a long tradition of hospitality all combine to make the Hotel Windmill, a museum hotel in the Liptovskyi Nature Reserve, Ukraine, a timeless spot in eastern Europe. In 2006, the owner, Mykola Shapkina, gathered information about the history of his property, and he and his family now host about 100 guests in the original wooden building. The Windmill Museum opened in 2014. A vivid portrait of the former Soviet industrial past appears in eight exhibit rooms. The museum is contained in a colonial-style house with a veranda, built in 1900. Six guest rooms feature distinctive decor, and guests enjoy the use of a veranda with a view of the nature reserve. The Hungarian-born Shapkina is a poet, a nature lover, and a man of the road who has traveled widely. His travels lead him to remote parts of Ukraine, and he has made friends with the hospitable folks he encounters. "Travelers who want to relax and unwind at an authentic experience," says Shapkina. "We have a relaxing atmosphere. Guests relax in their rooms. They don't have to do anything."1.
