This will open a window to the change you want to share: so it's likely you will want to invite all of the collaborative members into the review process. Unlike when editing, the collaborative reviewers can see your current settings for the layer/file you are sharing in the upper right corner of the panel. You can either add the new collective review process to an existing timeline for that file, or launch it from the New dialog by pressing in the menu bar and choosing Share for Review. Use this dialog to fine-tune the ability to initiate review, specify who is reviewing, and select the Share per User option. You can review multiple files by adding them all to a new dialog and checking Share per User. If you don't, the review process is viewable to all collaborators so you can show them how you get work across the board.
